DEFINITE SHAPE.

The Movement for Free Turnpikes Now Under Way.

Committee Named to Raise Funds
and Prepare a Petition Before the Fall Election.

The movement to secure free turnpikes is beginning to assume definite shape. At a second meeting held Tuesday night a committee was selected to begin the actual work of soliciting money for incidental expenses and to secure names to a formal petition for a vote
this fall.

The law requires 15 per cent. of the votes cast at the general election. The election in 1898 was only 3335. According to this only 500 votes must be secured to the petition and these can be secured in one day in this city alone.

The committee is composed of M.
C. Forbes, chairman; E. B. Bassett, O. H. Anderson, R. E. Cooper,
J. P. Prowse, J. A. Boyd and Nat
Gaither.

The plan is to issue bonds enough
to buy the existing turnpikes, about 60 miles, and also to build a new free pike to the coal mines in North Christian.

The need of free pikes and the great advantage they would give to Hopkinsville are admitted by all.
There is a hardly a doubt that the proposition would carry if submitted to a vote.

TWO GAMES TO-DAY.

Cadiz And Crofton Will Each Play
The Local Team.

The Grand Stand at the Baseball Park has been finished and was ready for the game with Allensville yesterday afternoon. This game was in progress when our forms were closed. This afternoon two games will be played.

At 2 o'clock Hopkinsville and Cadiz will cross bats and when this game is finished Hopkinsville will tackle the Crofton team. Only one price of admission to both games.

unteer Soldiers Here.

army: M. J. Coleman, Eliza Davis,

White, John McDaniel, Jake Meyers,

ard, John Dean, Dave Berry,
and Jas. H. Wicks. The men enlisted will be assigned to companies of cancer, aged about 35 years.

noon at the old family burying-

BRYAN'S TOUR.

Will Spend Ten Days In The State For Goebel.

All Of The Principal Points Will Be Visited And That Includes Hopkinsville

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 8.—The Democrats around campaign headquarters here were pleased to note
the second declaration of Mr. Bryan at Chicago that he was certainly coming to Kentucky to campaign for the Democratic State ticket this fall, though they knew that he had already personally stated to National Committeeman Woodson and to Mr. Goebel that he would come without fail during the month of September. The date of his coming will be arranged by Mr. Woodson to suit the national silver leader.

The latest information received at headquarters is that Mr. Bryan will spend at least ten days in Kentucky and the Campaign Committee is already preparing for his reception into the State and for a flying trip over in a special train.

Mr. Bryan will be met by a Reception Committee composed of leading Democrats at Louisville on his arrival and the special will probably make that place the starting point, touching at all the principal towns in the State and as many of the smaller ones as possible. He will be accompanied on the trip by Senator Blackburn, all of the nominees on the State ticket and those members of the Campaign Committee whose duties do not require their presence elsewhere. Democratic leaders from other States who happen to be here campaigning will also be aboard the special.

The visit of Mr. Bryan to the State is to be the event of the campaign and much good is expected to result from it.

RIVES AND FOWLER

Make Speeches At the Woodmen
of the World Banquet.

Pearl City Camp of the Woodmen of the World entertained their families and friends in a most elgant and hospitable manner at their lodge room in the Howe Building, Tuesday evening. There was close on to a hundred guests present, and everything possible
was done for their entertainment.
The room was elaborately decorated with trees, logs and other things that made it resemble nature's forest, while flags and striped bunting attested to the patriotism of the Lodge.

An address of welcome was delivered by Mr. Frank Rives, who,
in a few happy, well chosen remarks
made everybody feel at home.
This was followed by a speech
from Mr. W. T. Fowler, who explained the many noble and charitable features of their Lodge.
Then came the banquet, one of the most notable events upon every social occasion, and especially so in this. The menu was choice, and taken all in all it was one of the most enjoyable entertainments ever given by a Hopkinsville Lodge.

GREEN HOUSE.

Stock Company Interested In Starting One.

Mr. J. K. Postma, the florist on Durrett Avenue, is making an effort to enlarge his business and start a general green house, by forming a stock company. He has enlisted the interest and assistance of a number of capitalists and public spirited citizens and a meeting will be held at Dr. Bentley's office to-night to discuss the matter. Mr.
Postma is an experienced man in this business and is firmly of the opinion that it can be built up to big proportions, as the demand for flowers is a constant and growing

QUININE JIM.

Hon. James A. McKenzie For Goebel and the Ticket.

Strongly Endorses the Regular Nominee, and Especially
Mr. Goebel.

Since his return from Peru, to which country he was minister until three years ago, Hon. James A. McKenzie has been living on his farm at Oak Grove in this county.
His health has never been entirely restored since it was almost wrecked in the climate of South America. He has not been active in politics, but still takes a lively interest in the issues of the day.
Feeling that the opinion of so distinguished a citizen would be read with interest at this time, THE KENTUCKIAN addressed Mr. McKenzie a letter asking him to state what his position is in politics this year. In reply the following statement was received from him yesterday.

"In answer to your letter of inquiry I have this to say: I shall support the Democratic ticket nominated at the Louisville convention
from top to bottom.

I regard Mr. Goebel as not only a very able man, but a wise and strong leader, who possesses the qualities necessary to make an excellent Governor. He is just the kind of man needed to deal with the feudists in Clay and other counties
at the present time.

In my opinion his nomination was obtained just as fairly as the result would have been reached had either of his opponents been chosen.
The convention was as regular and fair as ordinary conventions. I repeat that I shall support the regular Democratic ticket from end to end."

This endorsement coming from a statesman of Mr. McKenzie's standing and prominence will have a far reaching effect in Western Kentucky. He served several terms in congress, was minister to Peru under Cleveland and has held many positions of honor, and history will assign him a place among the most pleasing orators of his time. He is the uncle of his namesake, young McKenzie Moss, the misguided young lawyer of Bowling Green who has wrecked a bright future
by bolting the ticket of his party.
There is no uncertain sound in the language he utters. The endorsement he gives the ticket is full and complete. Those who have followed his leadership in the past and who still love and honor him,
will follow him this year in the fight
to redeem Kentucky.

GOES TO KNOXVILLE.

To Investigate an Offer From a Big Printing House.

Mr. Walter L. Whitesides, who has for the past four years been foreman of the KENTUCKIAN office, has been tendered a similar position in a large printing house at Knoxville, Tenn., and will leave on the 15th inst for that city. He will not move his family to Knoxville until he has satisfied himself that the change is a desirable one. Mr.
Whitesides is an experienced and expert job printer and is in every respect a master of his calling.
His services in the KENTUCKIAN office have been performed so satisfactorily that the publisher takes pleasure in recommending him to his new employers as a first-class artist, and an employee in whom the fullest confidence may be reposed and who will always strive to please in the performance of his duties.

Headley's Cold Trail.

Mr. Jno. W. Headley, of Louisville, was in town yesterday searching with a microscope for Democrats opposed to Goebel. He found mighty little encouragement for his sideshow in Hopkinsville.

COUNTY INSTITUTE.

Nearly One Hundred Teachers
in Attendance.

Is Being Conducted by Prof. Jas.
H. Fuqua and Son, Prof.
Fuqua, Jr.

The county institute has been in session all of this week at the court house. Nearly one hundred teachers have been in attendance and the proceedings have not only been interesting to the teachers but to the general public as well.

Prof. Jas. H. Fuqua, of Russellville, is the instructor and he has been ably assisted by his son, Prof.
Jas. H. Fuqua, Jr.

The regular work of the institute has been disposed of from day to day and many interesting topics
have been discussed in turn.

Prof. S. L. Frogge, of Middlesborough, was a visitor yesterday
and made an entertaining talk.
Sessions are held morning and evening also at night.

On Monday evening Prof. Fuqua, Sr., delivered a lecture and on Tuesday evening his son spoke on "Greek and Latin." Last evening the same gifted young educator gave a lecture to which the public at large was invited.

The institute is still in session today and will finish its business tomorrow.

It has been a very pleasant and profitable week to the teachers.

GREEK AND LATIN.

Subject of an Entertaining Lecture
by Prof. Fuqua, Jr.

Prof. Jas. H. Fuqua, Jr., who with his father is conducting the Teachers' Institute, lectured at the Court House Tuesday night on "Greek and Latin." His address was able and instructive and set forth in a scholarly manner the advantages of a study of these languages. A literary program was carried out, several songs being rendered and recitations were made by Miss Ella Shadoin and Prof.
Fuqua.

FLIES HAVE COME

And They Have Brought Large
Families With Them.

The stock fly has put in an early appearance this year. The annual pest has come in countless myriads and the lives of live stock have been made miserable. The flies travel in swarms and it is almost impossible for stock to travel or even to eat. There has been a big boom in nets and bars of all kinds and even when partially protected the poor beasts are tortured almost beyond endurance.

SEA SHORE EXCURSION.

About Thirty Hopkinsville People
in the Crowd.

The much talked of excursion to the Virginia seacoast left Wednesday morning in charge of Messrs.
W. A. Wilgus and T. E. Bartley.
About 15 or 20 parties from this place made up a part of the crowd of 150 or more gathered up along the route to Louisville. The excursion will steer clear of the yellow fever district, striking the sea coast at Norfolk. The excursionists expect to be gone about ten days.

LIKINS TO SPEAK.

Prohibition Candidate For Secretary of State.

Mr. W. M. Likins, of Beaver
Dam, Ky., editor of the Kentucky
Gleaner and nominee on the Prohibition ticket for Secretary of State,
will speak at the Court House Wednesday night, August 16, in behalf of his State ticket.

Fattening Chickens.

The Barred Plymouth Rock chickens make excellent broilers, and should be fattened at the age of ten to twelve weeks. Keep them in a partly slatted coop without a floor, which can be moved over the grass every day. The coop should always be in a cool, quiet place away from the other fowls and have it rather dark. Feed regularly three times a day all they will eat (and then remove the dish) for ten days. Morning and night meals to be sweet corn meal (it is said that yellow corn meal is more fattening than white), moistened enough so that it will crumble. The major portion of the noon feed must be moist corn meal in which is mixed some chopped or mashed cooked vegetable. Turnips and potatoes lead, I believe, as the most fattening of the vegetables, but beets, cabbage and beans will serve also as appetizers and this is an important feature in the fattening process, that each meal be eaten with eagerness, so vary the vegetables.

A little cooked meat chopped finely and put in the noon mash two or three times as good. An occasional noon meal of boiled wheat is desirable. About half an hour after each meal if they are given fresh, cool water it will help to fatten them very much, in fact the best of water should be before them all the time. It is said that a hen that is at large will drink twenty times a day and how much more need must a fowl that is being fattened have of constant access to water.

After these chickens are more than twelve weeks old, it is useless to try to fatten them till they have about gotten their growth, when the same system can be followed. Light Brahmas make an excellent rooster when they are seven and eight months old when the system of fattening has been followed with them.

Pains should be taken to have some covering for the exposed sides of the coops during storms, and when the ground is damp or wet there should be a floor under the coop.—Rural World.

SHORT TALK.

Be on the watch.
Disinfect once a week.
Bad food invites disease.
Remove droppings daily.
Comfort is a health tonic.
Get at the root of the evil.
Filth is a chum of disease.
Fight indigestion and lice.
An overfed hen is not a well one.

Prompt treatment avoids disaster.
Negligence is one of disease's followers.
Overcrowding is an enemy to health.

Peter Putoff always has sick chickens.
Sickness is a penalty for some mistake.
A careless man has sick stock before he knows it.
Breed only from good, strong healthy vigorous stock.

The skum of the chicken fountain is a disease breeder.
With hellbore dissolved in water and sprinkled on the roosts is sure death to lice.

Nipping the slight ailments in the bud, is the secret possessed by the expert poultryman.

Eternal vigilance is the price of freedom from lice and the depredations of vermin, says Farm Journal.

Farm Journal recommends Phenol Sodique in all cases of canker or diphtheritic roup. It can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Ten drops of colchicum wine in a teaspoonful of cod liver oil, is recommended for male birds that have lost the use of their legs.

Dr. W. F. Roth says the origin of roup is usually found in unintelligent care, filth, cold drafts and dampness, a low standard of vitality, and often by infection. Be careful then, that all birds bought are healthy.

Farm Journal says feather pulling may be checked by dissolving powdered aloes in water and washing the feathers of the birds that have been plucked. This renders the feathers distasteful to the culprits that do the plucking. Bran moistened with vinegar is said to cure the habit in hens that have contracted it as a result of indigestion.

A correspondent in Practical Poultryman says he cures gapes by placing a pint basin on the stove with a little sour milk in and after the curd had separated he lets it sour a day or so and gives to his chickens. Always have plenty of water by chickens so they will not drink too much.—[A Few Hens.

Wise Hen.

A duck which faithfully stuck to business during summer, and laid several dozens of large fawn-colored eggs, complained that she wasn't appreciated.

"See that hen over there," said the duck, "she hasn't laid as many eggs as I have, nor as big, but she has books written about her, and verses composed in her honor, while nobody is saying a word about me."

"The trouble with you is," said a wise rooster standing near, "that you don't tell the public what you have done. You lay an egg and waddle off without saying a word, but that sister of mine never lays one without letting everybody in the neighborhood know it. If you want to cut any ice in this community you must learn to advertise.—Boyce's Hustler.

Notes In Passing.

Prepare for storms.
Make fresh nests often.
"There's room on top!"

Don't get your expectations too high.

Grocery Bills and Eggs.

About the most satisfactory antidote we have found for the grocer's bill, which annoys us every six months, is hen fruit. When we place fifteen dozen eggs every week against a week's grocery purchase we have things pretty well balanced, oftentimes calling for a credit of a dollar or two. We don't make any attempts at growing poultry as a money crop, nor selling eggs as a business. We simply take to market fifteen or twenty dozen eggs every week during the laying season, and sell them to our grocer at the prevailing price, taking same in trade. The result is but little if any cash is extracted from our pocket by the vendor of merchandise. This inspires confidence in the great row-combed hens which cost us so little to keep and respond so liberally to regular feeding of inexpensive feeds. We have come to regard the hen as a necessary appearance on the farm, and given her a place on the account book or ledger where her business is recorded from month to month.

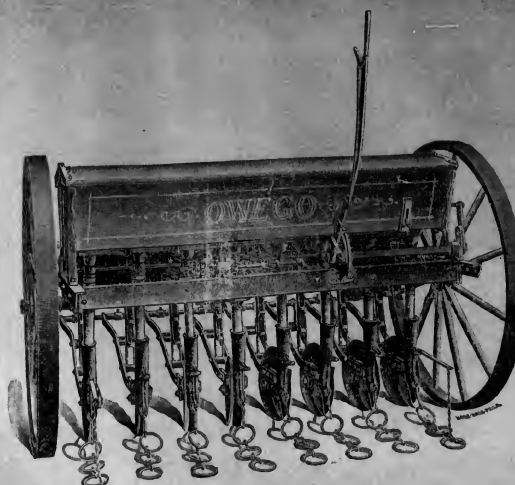

Eggs sold here last winter for thirty-five cents per dozen; the present price is twelve cents, which is the average the year around. At this price, eggs and butter at twenty-five cents per pound, will balance the grocery bill easily. If it succeeds for us why not for you?

The reason some people decry the poultry business is they have tried it on a loose, haphazard basis, and quite naturally met failure or disappointment in profits. One should engage therein by degrees, going from one point to another guided and aided by past experience. Like any other business, it requires a pretty good amount of common hard sense to successfully manage it, and without this all-essential there is nothing in it save experience. We have been all along the line, and speak from failures and successes, ups and downs, which have been about evenly or equally divided. We started on a small scale, and have not yet reached the B. class, so to speak.—National Stockman and Farmer.

A MINE OF CRYSTALS.

Dying Man Tells a Valuable Secret to a Milwaukeean.

Some balls turned from quartz crystals have obtained a considerable amount of popularity, chiefly for decorative purposes, a new mining field has been opened up for those who have sufficient confidence in the permanence of the present fancy. Thus far, says the New York Tribune, the largest and finest balls have come from Japan, one notable specimen being now in the possession of Miss Helen Gould. It is about 7 1/2 inches in diameter, and together with its gold and silver mountings, is said to have cost Miss Gould $15,000. But within the last year several tons of valuable crystals have been produced in this country, and it is hoped that from some of these masses, or from others still waiting to be excavated in the same neighborhood, balls may be turned which will equal the foreign ones in size and beauty. This immense deposit of quartz crystals is being worked by a Milwaukee mining expert, John E. Burton, and the story of how he came to undertake the project reads somewhat like the Capt. Kidd tales of caves of buried treasure.

"Several years ago," said Mr. Burton, who has just spent a couple of weeks in this city, "a friend of mine, a minerologist, who was very ill and believed he could not recover, told me a secret which he had long guarded carefully. Although his story sounded much like many other improbable yarns of the kind, I was somewhat impressed with the idea that it was true. Briefly, it was that in an old cave, the exact location of which he described carefully, in the Sierra Nevada mountains in Calaveras county, Cal., there were tons upon tons of pure quartz crystals, many of them of huge size. He gave me the name of the owner of the property in which the cave was—Capt. Jack McCloskey, of Mokelumne hill—telling me to believe what he told me and to investigate the contents of the wonderful cave. After spending nearly months in studying the subject of quartz crystals and in making inquiries regarding the demand for them and their market value, I decided to try to discover the deposit. Having located the cave, it was bought by a friend of mine, and I called on Tiffany & Co., which firm I knew to be interested in quartz crystals. Naturally they were a little incredulous about the existence of the cave, but they said that if my statements were true they would handle all the crystals I could send them.

"Well, it took me seven months to open the cave, but when I saw the astounding mass of crystal it contained I considered myself well paid for my time and labor. Last February I shipped 12 tons—an entire car load—of the sparkling stones to Tiffany & Co. Among these were some magnificent specimens, but I hoped to discover still finer ones in the course of the present winter's work."

There is now to be seen at Tiffany & Co.'s a crystal ball 7 1/2 inches in diameter, which was turned from one of the Calaveras county specimens. It is flawless and as clear as distilled water, and is valued at $8,000. The machinery for turning the balls is very expensive, and this fact, together with the rarity of crystals that will yield perfect balls of large size, accounts for the high prices charged for them. It would be possible to produce much larger balls if occasional flaws were admitted, but when a perfect one is desired there is often a great deal of waste in the cutting. The 7 1/2-inch ball now at Tiffany's was originally 7 1/2 inches in diameter, but, owing to the discovery of a small flaw, it had to be cut down and turned to its present size. The value of the balls increases far more rapidly when the diameter is more than seven inches. Mr. Burton declares that if he could secure a crystal which would turn a perfect ten-inch ball such a sphere would sell for $25,000 without any difficulty. Besides the use of the crystals for balls there is a certain, although limited, market for them in another way. At present buttons of pure crystal, cut in various shapes, are seen upon fashionable evening gowns, and many of the small specimens can be sold for this purpose.

ADVICE TO A GRADUATE.

First Published Years Ago, But Just as Good as Ever.

Remember, son, that the world is older than you are by several years; that for thousands of years it has been so full of men smarter and better younger men than yourself that their feet stuck out of the former windows; when they died the old globe went wagging on, and not one man in 10,000,000 went to the funeral or even heard of the death.

Be as smart as you can, of course. Know as much as you can without blowing the packing out of your cylinder heads; shed the light of your wisdom abroad in the world, but don't dazzle people with it. And don't imagine a thing is so simple because you say it's.

Don't be too sorry for your father because he knows so much less than you do; remember the reply of Dr. Wayland to the student of Brown university who said it was an easy enough thing to make proverbs such as Solomon wrote.

"Make a few," tersely replied the old man. And we never heard that the young man made any. Not more than two or three, anyhow.

The world has great need of young men, but no greater need than the young men have of it. Your clothes fit you better than your father's; fit him; they cost more money, they are more stylish, your mustache is neater, the cut of your hair is better, and you are prettier, O, far prettier than "pa." But, young man, the old gentleman gets the biggest salary, and his homely, scrambling signature on the business end of a check will drain more money out of the bank in five minutes than you could get out with a ream of paper and a copperplate signature in six months.

Young men are useful, and they are ornamental, and we all love them, and we couldn't engineer a picnic successfully without them. But they are no novelties, son. O, no, nothing of the kind. They have been here before—Burlington Hawke.

Buying a Manila Girl.

On one of his trips from San Francisco to Manila, Frank Bucklin, of the United States steamer Warren, saw and admired a beautiful Manila child, about ten years of age. Speaking of her to a friend, he said: "Don't you think that would be a nice present to take home to my wife—a regular little Filipino? My wife can bring her up for a lady's maid."

"Why don't you buy her then," said the friend.

"Good idea," said Bucklin, and he forthwith offered the mother a dollar for the child.

The Manila mamma handed over the girl with one hand and grabbed the dollar with the other. Mr. Bucklin took the wild young thing back with him, but she hit, fought, scratched and kicked until his life became a burden. Every day boat-loads of Manila mammas came alongside the Warren offering tender girls for sale to the fat man. He refused 100 girls the first day, and finally, to escape the consequences of his rash act, he gave the little Manila girl back to her mother, together with a bonus of two dollars. This only increased the desire on the part of the Filipinos to sell their children, and Bucklin was the happiest man on board ship when she weighed anchor and left Manila harbor.

Dog And Peafowl Fight.

An exciting encounter took place yesterday afternoon in the courthouse yard. Jailer Miller has a "yaller" dog and peafowl, and the two are not the best of friends. The dog was given a plate of bones, and the peafowl attempted to frighten him away, but the canine held his own for about half an hour, but managed to do little eating. Finally the fowl sailed in and gave the dog a good whipping running him entirely out of the yard. The fowl then leisurely picked his choice from the morsels intended for the animal.

Because of the discovery of new cases of small-pox, the Frankfort Council has again issued an order prohibiting public gatherings.

About one month ago my child, which is fifteen months old, had an attack of diarrhoea accompanied by vomiting. I gave it such remedies as are usually given in such cases, but as not giving the relief, we sent for a physician and it was under his care for a week. At this time the child had been sick for about ten days and was having about twenty five operations of the bowels every twelve hours, and we were soon convinced that unless it was soon checked and relief it would end in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was recommended, and I decided to try it. I soon noticed a change for the better; by its continued use a complete cure was brought about and it is now perfectly healthy.—C. L. Boogs, Stumptown, Gilmer Co., W. Va. For sale by R. C. Openly Promised to Vote For Goebel for Governor.

(Louisville Times June 28.)

W. H. Sweeney, of Marion, one of Mr. Hardin's chieftains, was now called for. Mr. Sweeney responded with a statement that provoked hisses from a large part of the convention. He stood on his chair and said:

"Like my distinguished friend, (Mr. Rhea) who has just spoken to you, I am going to vote for Mr. Goebel, but it is because I am a Democrat and have to."

This is the same Sweeney who is now so prominent in the Brownie movement.

"LITTLE EGYPT" DEAD.

World's Fair Midway Character Passed Away in Squalor at Omaha.

Omaha, Neb. Aug. 8.—"Little Egypt," the dancer, whose contortions and gyrations aroused so much criticism in the Midway Plaisance at the Chicago fair, died yesterday in a cheap lodging house. She claimed to be the woman whose dance created a sensation at the still more sensational Seelye dinner in New York. She made her advent in Omaha a year ago, arriving in a box car with a negro and a white man as fellow-travelers. She was arrested at the time and spent several days in jail. She married a man named Ham Carter in South Omaha and has been making a precarious living with him at various resorts in the neighborhood.

ASLEEP ON TRACK.

An Unknown Negro Went to Sleep on the I. C. at Eddyville and Killed Instantly.

An unknown negro man, about twenty-five years of age, was struck by train No. 201 just at the south end of the cut at Eddyville yesterday and instantly killed. He was asleep with his head on the track and the engineer did not see the man in time to apply the brakes and stop the train.

It took time to collect the man's remains and put them on the train, which was delayed thirty minutes by the accident.

Nothing could be learned of the man's people or his home.—Paducah News.

BOB TAYLOR

Says Goebel is a Rising Star of Politics.

In a private letter to Mr. W. R. Howell, Hon. Robt. L. Taylor makes this reference to Senator Goebel, the Democratic leader in Kentucky: "I am glad to see such a man betrothed to such a state. He is a rising star, as bright as shines in our constellation. I hope he will redeem the old-time majority for Democracy, and that he will unlimber that big brain which he carries around in that big head of his, and give to Kentucky the best administration she has had for years."

Fine Farm in This County For Sale.

In order to wind up the estate of Dr. Jas. Wheeler, deceased, we offer for sale his home place known as "Richland" situated on the Kentucky and Tennessee trip line 5 miles south of Hopkinsville.

His tract of land contains 450 acres, is surrounded by a fine hedge fence, is in a perfect state of cultivation and is one of the most fertile and productive farms in the State.

There is on it a fine brick residence of 9 or 10 rooms with bath, room, pantry, cellar and kitchen, costing originally $17,000, to build, now in good repair. Also, 5 large tobacco barns, made of 9 or 10 servant houses and all needed out houses.

It has an unfailing supply of water in abundant quantity. No more desirable suburban home can be found anywhere. Its soil is unequalled in productiveness. Yielding in ordinary season, 1000 lbs tobacco, 25 to 30 bushels of wheat and 8 or 10 bbls. of corn to each acre in cultivation.

Time to suit purchaser. Apply to W. G. WHEELER, Hopkinsville, or C. K. WHEELER & W. F. BRADSHAW, Paducah.

Cooking With Gas.

A gas range, if properly used, is cheaper than coal. Why? Because all expense stops when the gas is turned off; because it requires no kindling, no labor in carrying in of coal or carrying out of ashes; because it preserves all the nutritious elements of meats, broods and vegetables; because it is always ready and saves the most valuable of all things—time—and because it saves the wear and tear on human nerves.

The Gas Company will run service pipe to cut free of charge, and will sell gas ranges at ACTUAL COST and do all other work connected therewith at lowest rates. Gas for fuel is $1.25 net per one thousand cubic feet, and illuminating gas is the safest of all fuels. The risk of oil fuel is too great to chance it when gas can be obtained. For further information see T. G. Littlehales, Lessee, Latham Hotel Building.

DEATH OF BIG FOOT

Indian Story of Early Times in Kentucky.

The Little Rock, Ark., Gazette reports an interesting conversation with "Grandma" Finnell, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Jno. M. Bracy in that city. She is over 90 years of age and not a grey hair in her head, and can thread a fine needle without glasses. In the conversation she told the story of how her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Capt. Gano, killed the Indian Chief, Big Foot, and successfully defended her cabin all night against the Indians, thereby saving her own life, and the lives of her two little children.

Grandma Gano was the first settler at the big spring in what is now Georgetown, Scott county, Ky. One day Grandfather Gano, who had been a captain in the regular army under Gen. Ethan Allen, had to go back to the settlements after supplies. He left his wife and two little children in their log cabin. He had loaded and left with his wife four guns, as the woods were full of wild beasts and wild Indians and the nearest settlement was ten miles away and their nearest neighbor was six miles away. He cautioned his wife to stay with the two children inside of the cabin and keep the door barred until he returned the next day, as there was great danger of Indians or wild beasts, at any hour during the day or night. All day long she kept watch, but saw nothing to alarm her until about dusk, when she discovered the skulking form of an Indian dart from behind one tree to the shelter of another tree, approaching the house. She at once lifted the trap door in the middle of the room and put her two children down into a little kind of a cellar made for the purpose, gave them a pan of bread and milk, told them the Indians were coming and not to make the least bit of noise. She shut down the trap door, and saw that the door was double burred, picked up a rifle and waited. Darkness came on but she never for a moment relaxed her vigilance. Soon she heard a step approaching the door. Some one knocked and a gruff voice said: "Open door, me captain's friend." The brave woman made no answer, but peeping through the loopholes that were made in all the cabins of the pioneers to shoot through, she saw in the starlight the forms of six Indians around her door. The chief, standing nearest the door, again spoke. "Open door, white woman, me captain's friend, me come talk." Still no answer. He struck the door a fierce blow with his hatchet, saying: "Me know captain gone. Open door or me burn house." Still no answer, but peeping through the loopholes she saw the Indians striking fire with their flints and steels and she realized the horrible fate in store for her and her little children. Putting her rifle to the loophole she took quick aim at the chief, pulled the trigger and sent a bullet crashing through his breast. He fell without a groan, and the other Indians ran back and got behind the trees, from whence they kept up a desultory firing all night, the brave woman answering them shot for shot. At daylight the Indians disappeared, and soon thereafter Capt. Gano rode up. They discovered that the Indian that Grandma Gano had killed was the famous "Big Foot," the greatest fighter among all the Indians in Kentucky. They buried the great chief on the top of the bluff near the spring and when Grandma Finnell was a child they used to scare her by telling her that "Big Foot" would come out of his grave every night at midnight and go down to the spring and groan and moan as if in great agony. So strong was this belief among the children there that they would not go to the spring alone after dark. In fact, even the grown people were not entirely free from this superstition.

Convict Father for the First Time Beholds His Ten-Year-Old Daughter.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 9.—There was a pathetic scene at the penitentiary clerk's office this morning between Jack Barker, an Estill county prisoner, and his wife, who had not met for eleven years, or since the latter was sent here for the murder of a man who had attacked her virtue.

The wife was accompanied by her ten-year-old daughter, Mary, his child, whom the prisoner had never seen before. The child seemed delighted to know her father. Strong efforts are being made to secure a pardon for Barker by prominent citizens.

JOE'S ALL RIGHT.

Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn Ready To Make Speeches For The Ticket.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 9.—Secretary Haly, of the Democratic Campaign Committee, has received a letter from former Senator Jo Blackburn, announcing his complete restoration to health, and that he had prepared himself for the opening of the campaign at Mayfield on next Saturday with nominee Goebel. He also said he would be in Frankfort to-morrow, en route to Western Kentucky, and that he would join Senator Goebel here.

Pledged to King Solomon.

The Lexington bolters' conference was presided over by H. B. Kinsolving, of Montgomery. This calls to mind a story told of old Uncle Joe Read, once State Senator, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, and later doorknocker of the Senate. A gentleman approaching Uncle Joe and asked him if he didn't think Bill Sweeney was the biggest fool in the State. Uncle Joe was essentially a trimmer, and he replied cautiously: "Well, I don't know, I'm pledged to that fellow Kinsolving."—Paducah News.

Deboe's Close Shave.

Senator Deboe's drooping mustache is no more. The absence of the upper lip decoration has worked a startling change in the Kentucky Senator. When he appeared at the Republican caucus at the Galt House yesterday his friends scarcely knew him. All day long he sat with a ponderous frown upon his features and a "now-don't-I-look-like McKinley?" expression in his eyes.—Courier-Journal.

Struggle with a Cougar.

In company with an Indian a Port Arthur (Wash.) man went fishing for salmon in a rocky river. Suddenly a big cougar appeared at the entrance to a cave, and with a roar crunched to spring at the Indian. The white man threw his fish spear at the cougar, while the Indian ran for his life. The spear entered the animal's neck and ear, and thus the man held him at a distance and dared to draw him. But the cougar was too strong and agile for that, and finally the spear came out of its hold. For four long hours the man and the cougar fought, the cougar walking around and around, and every once in a while making a spring, which the man every time repulsed with the spear. The combat only ended when the Indian returned, after a 12-mile trip, with a gun. His first shot wounded the beast in the side; the second lodged in its head and killed it.

Horse Defends a Dog.

Dogs and horses generally get on well together, but the following story from Manchester proves that in some cases the friendship is something more than a mere toleration of each other. A carriage horse, accompanied by his stable companion, a retriever dog, to which he was exceedingly attached, was drinking at a trough near the exchange. While the dog was waiting for his friend to finish his draught a large mastiff picked a quarrel with him, which ended in a fight. The mastiff, as may be supposed, had the better of the battle, and the retriever was severely bitten. The horse, the moment he heard his friend's cry, broke from the man who was holding him, hurried to the rescue, and, after kicking the mastiff across the street, returned to the trough and finished his drink.

THE PARTIALLY MUSICAL.

Want to Sit in a Comfortable Seat and Hear Tunes.

There are multitudes of them in London. They go about uttering the passionate cry: "Give us a tune!" Their desire for a tune might well move a diminished seventh to tears or cause the stoutest-augmented fourth to quail and respect the triad, says the London World. It is no manner of use telling them that there are tunes in the operas of Wagner, that the "disturber" streams with tunes, that the wordbird music in "Die Walkure" is magically tuneful, that the overture to "Tannhauser" and the third act of "Lohengrin" contain airs that turn us into mandarins. They reply that they want tunes that are tunes. Never argue with them. It is useless and leads to discords, and they prefer discords, though very often they could not tell you the difference between one and the other. These partially musical people, who swarm like bees in the busy streets of London, like something tripping. When a violinist suddenly plays pizzicato they suddenly think him an extraordinary violinist. When a player by some trick makes his instrument sound like something that it is not—for instance, when a violinist produces a tone like a harp by playing a natural harmonic note pizzicato, or a bassoon player produces a sound like an alderman asleep after a city hall dinner by means that need not be described—they are enthusiastically delighted, and hastily acknowledge music to be the greatest of the arts. They dread a fugue more than pestilence, a piece of strict counterpoint more than famine. Talk not to them of subject and counter-subject, of sequences and modulations, of exposition—which they connect with Paris and the next century—and of inversion. They cannot dissect music, nor do they desire to. They decline to use their intellect in connection with a gay art—as they consider it. What they want is to sit in a comfortable seat and hear tunes. Yet they are partially musical and they have every right to be considered. Also, they can be gently educated, if you don't let them know it, just as children can swallow pills if they don't know they are swallowing pills, but are totally unable to get them down if they do.

NIGHT KITE FLYING.

How Boys Can Make the Sport Picturesque.

You have all flown kites in the daytime, but have you ever done so at night? Many very pretty and very weird effects can be obtained by this night kite flying. For instance, you can take an ordinary kite, and upon it, with brush dipped in phosphorus, trace a face. When the kite is high up in air, there grinning down upon you, will be a face of fire. Or you can trace a circle upon the paper, cover it with the phosphorus, and then you will have far up in the air a pale yellow globe bearing a very strong resemblance to another moon. Many very striking effects which your ingenuity will suggest to you can be obtained in this way.

In using the phosphorus, however, be very careful, as it is a chemical. If you fly the new box kites a very pretty effect can be obtained by hanging a little Chinese lantern to each corner and also along the string with which you hold it. As the box kite is very steady, there is comparatively little danger of your lanterns being blown out, and the appearance of these many twinkling colored lights high up in the air is very beautiful.—N. Y. Herald.

Licking Postage Stamps.

In connection with the practice of stamp-licking, a medical contemporary says: What layman would suspect that the unassuming vehicle for the spread of deadly ailments? Yet so it is, and the name of "stamp-lickers' tongue" has recently been brought to our notice by two distinguished medical men. It is known to the few that the common postage stamp owes its adhesiveness to the serum of the horse. It follows that the film drawn from such a source may, or even must, at times be charged with microbes of a more or less hurtful nature. If a man licked a large number of stamps daily over a sufficiently long period of time the chances are he would set up cancer of that much-abused member. The danger has long ago been recognized by the postal authorities of this country, who have placed dampers on the counters of the post office.

PLUCKY YOUNG WOMAN.

She Carries Mail Twice a Week Over the Most Barren, Desolate Region of Arizona.

There are several interesting illustrations of the advanced new women in Arizona, including women ranchers, vaqueros, bank cashiers, stable keepers and butchers, but the one whose occupation most thoroughly interests newcomers to the territory is Miss Sarah M. Burke, a jolly, sturdy and brave little woman about 35 years old, who carries the United States mail over the star route from St. Johns to Jimtown twice a week. The distance from St. Johns to the end of the route is 52 miles, and it requires a good deal of stout-heartedness, a liberal supply of self-confidence and a dash of love of adventure for anyone to make the trip.

Miss Burke's mail route leads through as wild and desolate a region as one can well imagine. Rocky, barren, mountainous, bleak and blasted are weak adjectives for description. What they streams there are poisoned with alkali. Navajo Indians, and occasionally an Apache, who has left the reservation, are somewhat plentiful in that region, but white men very seldom go there, and then only to get the gold, silver and copper which have been literally strewn throughout this blighting, fierce region. Nothing in the way of vegetation can grow there.

Along the western border of this desolate, uncanny wilderness Sarah Burke rides twice a week. Generally she is alone, and if she has a companion he is either a miner, a commercial traveler or a territorial lawyer, who has rented a horse from Miss Burke's father, and she is to collect payment for the same and see to its care. She says she is a fatalist, and no matter how much danger may ensue, she will not come to her death until the appointed hour. She is always armed, and when a mere child she was the crack shot of the mining camp at Harqua Hala. She rode the route first in 1888, when her father, who was the mail carrier, was taken ill. He has never recovered, and the plucky daughter has filled his place ever since.

TWENTY-SIX WOUNDS.

Received in a Single Action North of Manila by George Kreider, an Ohio Boy.

George Kreider, whose picture is here given, has the distinction of bearing 26 wounds, all the result of the American campaigning north of Manila. All of Kreider's 26 wounds were received in one action and the astonishing feat to be recorded is that he still lives, and, barring difficulties, will continue to live. He is a Wharton (O.) boy, who enlisted in St. Louis three years ago. He was assigned to the Third Army.

Beauty is born in the blood. Beauty is more than "skin deep," it is blood deep. When the blood is tainted by disease the flesh will feel it and the skin will show it. Sallow or muddy complexion, pimples, blotches, and eruptions are only the surface signs of impure blood. Face washes, lotions, complexion powders, may palliate the evils but they cannot cure the disease. The only cure is to cleanse the blood of the poisonous matter which is the cause of the outbreak in the flesh and skin. Impure blood can be absolutely purified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Its effect on flesh and skin is marked. Sores heal and disappear. The skin becomes smooth, and regains its natural color. The eyes brighten and sparkle, the whole body is radiant with the brightness and beauty of health. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant, and is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics. The use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, assists the action of the "Discovery" by cleaning the system of clogging matter.

NEWPORT BLOUSES.

DAINTY THINGS CREATED FOR
WILLIE VANDERBILT'S BRIDES

MRS. VANDERBILT'S PRETTY BLOUSES
ARE among the most astonishing and pretty features of the summer fashions. They are made for morning, afternoon and evening wear, and every woman has a goodly supply of them for all occasions.

When Willie Vanderbilt's bride came from the wedding altar to her new home at Newport to spend the days of the honeymoon, and incidentally to open the Newport season at an unusually early date, for which the shopkeepers of the little town are blessing her, she brought with her an unusually large number of these pretty and bewitching blouses.

It is said that her youthful husband has a decided liking for this feature of the summer fashions, and it is for this reason, more than any other, that his young bride wears so many of them.

BLOUSE FOR MORNING, AFTERNOON AND EVENING.

But wear them as they wish, and in them she looks charming. Her favorite colors are the blues. She wears a pretty sky blue at one time, and then again it will be a navy blue, but it is seldom that any of the blouses of which she has so many has not blue of some kind worked into them. If there is any exception to this rule it is the ones she wears in the morning, when they are often of the purest white. But then white is particularly suited to her situation in life just now while she is still a bride.

But young Mrs. Vanderbilt is not the only woman who has a decided liking for the blouse. It is worn by everybody, or at least everybody to whom it is becoming, and even by some to whom it is not. For the mornings nearly everybody wears white, whether they be brides, blushing brides or matrons.

VISITING DOWN FOR MRS. VANDERBILT.

there are silken slips made to wear under the fine white muslin and muslin blouses of the morning. In color they are of the palest shades of pink and blue and gossamer green and yellow. They are made with the low neck and without sleeves, as a rule. Occasionally one sees one with both high neck and long sleeves, but they are by far the exception.

BEAUTIFUL WHITE ONES FOR THE MORNINGS

One of the morning blouses worn by Mrs. Vanderbilt is of the finest white muslin. The front of this blouse is arranged in tiny tucks, and broad bands of Valenciennes insertion which reveal the presence of a blue silk slip.

A second worn by this same interesting young woman is of white silk null. It is made with three tiny tucks and a band of French embroidery with a large open-work pattern. Under this is worn a pale green silken slip. The sleeves are made very plain, with a mere puff of the embroidery falling over the hand.

simple, but very effective. It is made of white muslin with a seamless front arranged with insertion of Valenciennes in graduated lengths, and opens slightly over a narrow vest and yoke of silk dotted Russian net. The sleeves show a small strip of the Russian net from the top to the wrist, falling in a V over the hand.

Among the evening blouses worn by Mrs. Vanderbilt are some pretty ones made of silk and liberty satin. These blouses have an applique of lace, and are handsomely embroidered. She has so many pretty ones that it is hard to choose the ones to describe, and to try to include all of them would be utterly impossible, so great is the variety.

One of them is of sky blue glace, and is elaborately embroidered in green leaves, and there are rows of tiny black velvet buttons. It is made with a high collar and yoke of the sky blue glace and heavily embroidered. It has two dozen tiny black velvet buttons down the center of the yoke. A large turn-back collar that is finely tucked. The blouse is fastened at one side with three large velvet buttons, and embroidered in four different sprays of the green leaves. It is finished at the waist line with a small roll of black velvet. The sleeves are embroidered, and have a small cap with a V falling over the hand.

A second of those for evening wear is of Reseda silk, made with lapping tucks down the front, and for the high standing collar. It also has the lapping tucks in clusters of three on the tight-fitting sleeves. With it is a small sleeveless bolero jacket just reaching to the waist of a deeper shade of the silk. This jacket has an oddly shaped skirt collar of the Reseda silk that has an applique of lace around, with a fan-shaped bow of the lace to fasten the bolero.

ELABORATE CREATIONS FOR AFTERNOON

For the afternoon the materials are about the same as for evening wear. One of them of liberty satin is crossed in a bold diamond-shaped device, with lines of black satin ribbon. The fronts of this blouse are open, and are bordered with two ruchings of muslin de soie, with a vest of the silk striped chiffon draped over silk the shade of the liberty satin. The sleeves have a small band of the silk striped chiffon and ruchings of the muslin de soie and black satin to finish the scallops.

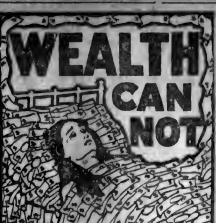

A marvelous gown the Mrs. Vanderbilt has not yet worn, but which will grace her perfect figure in the near future is for visiting. It is made of the new ochre luccell lace over white surah. The entire skirt is of the ochre luccell lace, and a Russian tunic of white surah, with an applique of the ochre luccell lace around the Russian tunic. The bodice is made with a square yoke of the ochre luccell lace, also the high standing collar and sleeves are of the same, with a full bodice of white surah that crosses in front and is brought down to the waist line and fastens with a buckle of gems. It is one of the most charming of the many visiting gowns that I have seen here this summer.

SARAH DAVIDSON.

The Diplomatic Language.

Until the middle of the last century Latin was most commonly used in treaties and even in correspondence. Only after Louis XIV's victories did French come into vogue, but Leopold II. of Austria protested against being addressed by Louis XIV. in French, and the treaty of Lunéville in 1801 was negotiated in Latin. In the final act of the congress of Vienna it is expressly provided that although the treaty is written in French that fact is not to be regarded as creating a precedent. Consulting directed our representatives abroad to communicate with foreign colleagues in English, adding a translation into the language of the person addressed. French undoubtedly possesses certain advantages for diplomatic purposes, but its general adoption rests rather on the imperfect acquaintance of most Frenchmen with foreign tongues.—London Chronicle.

PRACTICALLY A DAILY AT THE PRICE OF A WEEKLY.

The striking and important events of the last year have established the overwhelming value of THE TRICE-A-WEEK WORLD to every reader. For an almost complete summary of the progress of all our wars and, moreover, has reported them as promptly and fully as if it were a daily. With our interests still extending throughout the world, with our troops operating in the Philippines, and the great Presidential campaign, too, at hand, its value is further increased.

The motto of THE TRICE-A-WEEK WORLD is improvement. It strives each year to be better than it was the year before, and the public confidence in it is shown by the fact that it now circulates more than ten times as many papers every week as any other newspaper, not a daily, published in America.

CONFEDERATE BILLS.

Larkin Harned's Fortune in Lost Cause Money.

Among the papers of the late Larkin Harned were found Confederate bills of all denominations amounting in the aggregate to $5,083. The money represented the savings of the thrifty old fellow while he was employed as mail carrier during the war and was paid in Confederate money. He had faith in the Confederate cause and boarded his earnings, but the small fortune he accumulated is now only valuable to those seeking relics of the "Lost Cause."

The belt in which he carried letters to the soldiers was also found among his effects. It was divided into several apartments, each just large enough to hold a letter. This will be cherished as an heirloom and valued relic by members of his family.
